

Tracking Support for an Independent Federal Receiver at Rikers

List compiled by the Katal Center for Equity, Health, and Justice

For years, community groups, advocates, and service providers have worked to reduce the city's jail populations and shut down Rikers. That work continues. Now, as the crisis in city jails worsens and the death toll rises, calls are growing for the federal courts to order an independent receiver to take control of Rikers.

As the Brennan Center for Justice has described:

“When a local or state government proves unable or unwilling to improve a distressed public institution that has long defied federal law, a federal court can take the troubled entity out of the government’s hands and appoint a ‘receiver’ – a nonpartisan expert – to assume direct control, with an eye towards reform.”

A federal receiver is not a panacea but could improve conditions for people incarcerated and employed there until Rikers is shut down once and for all.

The following list includes current and former government and corrections officials and community and advocacy groups who publicly support a federal receiver taking over at Rikers. This list of stakeholders does not represent a coalition. But it does reflect a growing consensus across the political spectrum that federal intervention at Rikers is needed to save lives and improve conditions for the people who are detained there or work there.
